Associate Professors of Sociology

1 - 2 permanent position(s) is available at the The Department of Sociology and Human Geography for an Associate Professor in the subject area of Sociology. The successful candidate will be required to do research and undertake teaching duties at all levels (bachelor, master and PhD). The position also involves administrative and other duties in accordance with university regulations. Applicants who are qualified for full professorship can be promoted after a formal review process once they have taken up their position.

Commented [KF1]:

Qualification requirements

The candidate must have a relevant PhD degree, and have a strong research profile and track record of publications in acknowledged publication channels.

The candidate must be able to contribute to the further development of research and teaching of Sociology as a discipline in the Department. The main areas of research in the Department are: Global challenges, Migration and integration, Cultural and political participation, The Nordic model, Family and the life course, Social inequality, Working life, and Marginalisation. Candidates for the position should have research experience and teaching qualifications that are compatible with this research profile. Questions regarding the scope of the thematic areas may be addressed to the Head of the Department/Research (see below).

In the evaluation of candidates for the position, emphasis will be placed on research and international publication in recent years as well as the candidate's future research potential. In the assessment of publications, originality, quality and scope will be emphasized. The successful candidate must be able to contribute to further strengthening of one or more of the research areas mentioned and of the research community in the department. The Department's overall needs will be part of the considerations made in the hiring process.

Pursuant to applicable regulations, the applicants will be evaluated based on their documented academic qualifications as well as qualifications in teaching, management and administration. The successful candidate must be able to teach within one or more of the Department's specialization courses, and must also be able to teach sociological theory and/or method at all levels. The successful candidate will be required to do research and to teach, advise and contribute to examinations at all levels of the programmes of study. The position also involves administrative and other duties in accordance with applicable rules. Applicants who do not have basic pedagogical competencies must acquire such within the first two years of employment. The working language and primary language of instruction is Norwegian, while some courses are given in English. If the candidate who is selected for the position does not speak Norwegian or another Scandinavian language, it will be required that he or she learns the language within two years.
