Associate Professors of Sociology

1 - 2 permanent position(s) are available at the Department of Sociology and Human Geography for an Associate Professor in Sociology. Applicants who are qualified for full professorship can be promoted after a formal review process once they have taken up their position.

The department is ranked as the premier academic research institute in sociology in Norway, conducting top international research while offering high quality education for students.

More about the position

The department seeks a potential scientific leader with clear research visions, educational and administrative skills and the ability to establish and lead research projects. The successful candidate has a strong research profile and track record of publications in acknowledged publication channels and is expected to strengthen both research and education in the sociological discipline at the department.

Research at the department is broadly orientated. We currently have strong research activities in the fields of social inequality, migration, integration and diversity, cultural and political participation, urban studies, sustainable transformations, population dynamics, and work, organisations and politics. The call is not thematically limited to these topics, but preference may be given to candidates with a potential to contribute to the ongoing academic dialogue in the department.

Candidates must have teaching qualifications that are compatible with the department's research profile and must be able to teach sociological theory and/or methods at all levels. The successful candidate will be required to teach, supervise and contribute to examinations at all levels. We seek in particular candidates with the motivation and competence to teach sociological methods (qualitative and quantitative). The position also involves administrative duties in accordance with applicable rules.

Applicants who do not have basic pedagogical competencies must acquire such within the first two years of employment.

The working language and primary language of instruction at the department is Norwegian, though some courses are given in English. Non-Norwegian/Scandinavian speaking appointees will be required to complete organized language training leading up to the Common European Framework of Reference for Languages (CEFR) level B2/"Bergenstest" within two years. Appointees are expected to acquire sufficient knowledge of a Scandinavian language to be able to participate actively in all aspects of departmental life within three years. Language training will be provided by the University.

Residence in the greater Oslo area is expected.

Qualification requirements and assessment criteria

The department's overall needs will be considered in the hiring process. Pursuant to applicable regulations, applicants will be evaluated based on their documented academic qualifications as well as qualifications in teaching, management and administration.

- The candidate must have a PhD degree in sociology or equivalent, and a demonstrated ability to contribute to the continued development of sociology as a discipline at the department through research activities, publications and education.
- In the evaluation of candidates for the position, emphasis will be placed on research and international publications from the last five years as well as the candidate's future research potential. In the assessment of publications, originality, quality and scope will be emphasized.

- Teaching abilities are an important factor in the evaluation of candidates. Relevant pedagogical and other experience should be well documented in a teaching portfolio. The teaching portfolio should provide an overview of teaching experience and pedagogical qualifications as well as a brief reflection statement. The statement should primarily describe the applicant's own teaching philosophy and an evaluation of own teaching skills at the university level.
- A proven ability to succeed in competitive, international arenas is an advantage (e.g. stipends, grants, publications, prizes).

In the evaluation of qualified candidates the full range of these criteria will be explicitly addressed and assessed.

Interviews will be part of the appointment process, along with a trial lecture.
